Biography

Ms. Sarah Mojarad

Ms. Sarah Mojarad holds the position of Communications Program Manager for Social Media at the California Institute of Technology (Caltech). She has a Bachelor’s of Arts in Psychology from Boston University and a Master’s of Science from Northeastern University in Corporate and Organizational Communications with concentration in Social Media and Online Communities.

At Caltech, she is working at the interface of social media and science. She holds the position of Lecturer for the course “Social Media for Scientists” that she co-created. This class is believed to be the first full-length course of its kind to teach STEM students issues with and professional use of modern digital communication methods.

Sarah currently provides consulting services to programs that are supported by the Department of Energy (DOE) and National Cancer Institute (NCI). She has recently presented her work to the National Science Board (NSB) of the National Science Foundation (NSF), the National Institutes of Health-National Cancer Institute (NIH-NCI), the Department of State, and at numerous universities.